

DIANNE COLACE

Dianne is a Board Certified Nurse Practitioner licensed to practice in MA and RI. She graduated summa cum laude with her Masters Degree in the Adult Nurse Practitioner program from Northeastern University in 2010. She has worked and excelled in a variety of medical areas such as Cardiology, Primary Care, and Acute Care. But her true passion is in the cosmetic industry, specifically Laser Hair Removal, making people feel better about themselves everyday. "Laser Hair Removal is not just a luxury or time saver in the shower everyday, for many its a necessity. So many men and women are plagued with unsightly hair which can really affect them psychologically, which many times is genetic, or related to hormonal imbalances. This is especially bothersome to women at the start of menopause. We start getting unsightly hair in all the wrong places! "I truly enjoy helping my guests at Bare feel confident about themselves!" -Dianne

WHERE YOU WANT IT, WHERE YOU DON'T

When it comes to women, there's one thing you can be certain of – she knows where she wants hair and where she doesn't. Whether she likes flowing locks or rocks a short style on her head, you can be sure she doesn't want hair growing on her chin, over her lip, under her armpits, on her legs, or back. Just like she invests in getting the hair on her head the way she wants it, she strives to keep hair out of the wrong places. There are options for that.

this, it causes the hair to fall out and the hair follicle to be destroyed, preventing a new follicle from forming.

While there are other types of laser therapies for hair removal, not all of them are created equal. IPL, or intense pulsed light, is one of those methods. Contrary to popular belief, this really doesn't qualify as a laser procedure, as it uses Xenon Flash Lamps. They use scattered or unfocused

One option is to pluck out the hair. It hurts and often leaves marks or scarring. One can also have hot wax applied and then removed with tape that rips out the hair – it burns and takes a tiny layer of skin with it. While these methods take hair out by the roots, they don't do anything to keep those hairs from growing back way too fast.

light, meaning that light is not strong enough to destroy the hair. Although hair shedding occurs with this procedure, it is not permanent and can lead to stimulated hair growth.

For women that are tired of dealing with the regrowth of unsightly hair an option that provides permanent hair reduction is the Candela Gentle Max Pro Laser, a highly advanced top of the line machine that is safe for all skin types.
